What if everyone looked alike, talked alike, and walked alike? What if, by some fantastic quirk of fate, everyone had the same dreams, talents, and aspirations? What if everyone liked the same things and thought the same way? Life would be exceedingly dull. Fortunately, everyone is different. And different is a good word to describe the class of '79.

The class of '79 is really separated from the other classes. It's special. It's at the tail end of a hectic decade. Future generations will reminisce about the seventies just as they now look nostalgically at the fifties and sixties. Of course, the same thing will eventually happen for the eighties, but that's in the future. Therefore, it is appropriate that the last class of the seventies should take a look back.

The seventies witnessed the first resignation of a U.S. President, Richard Nixon. His resignation and that of his Vice-President, Spiro Agnew, resulted in the appointment of Gerald Ford, the first man since George Washington to gain the office of President without being elected.

Cults flourished in the seventies. One particularly strong one ended in tragedy when a man named James Jones developed a huge following in his People's Temple. They migrated to Jonestown, Guyana, and there, in a stress situation, they drank cyanide-laced Kool-Aid in a mass suicide.

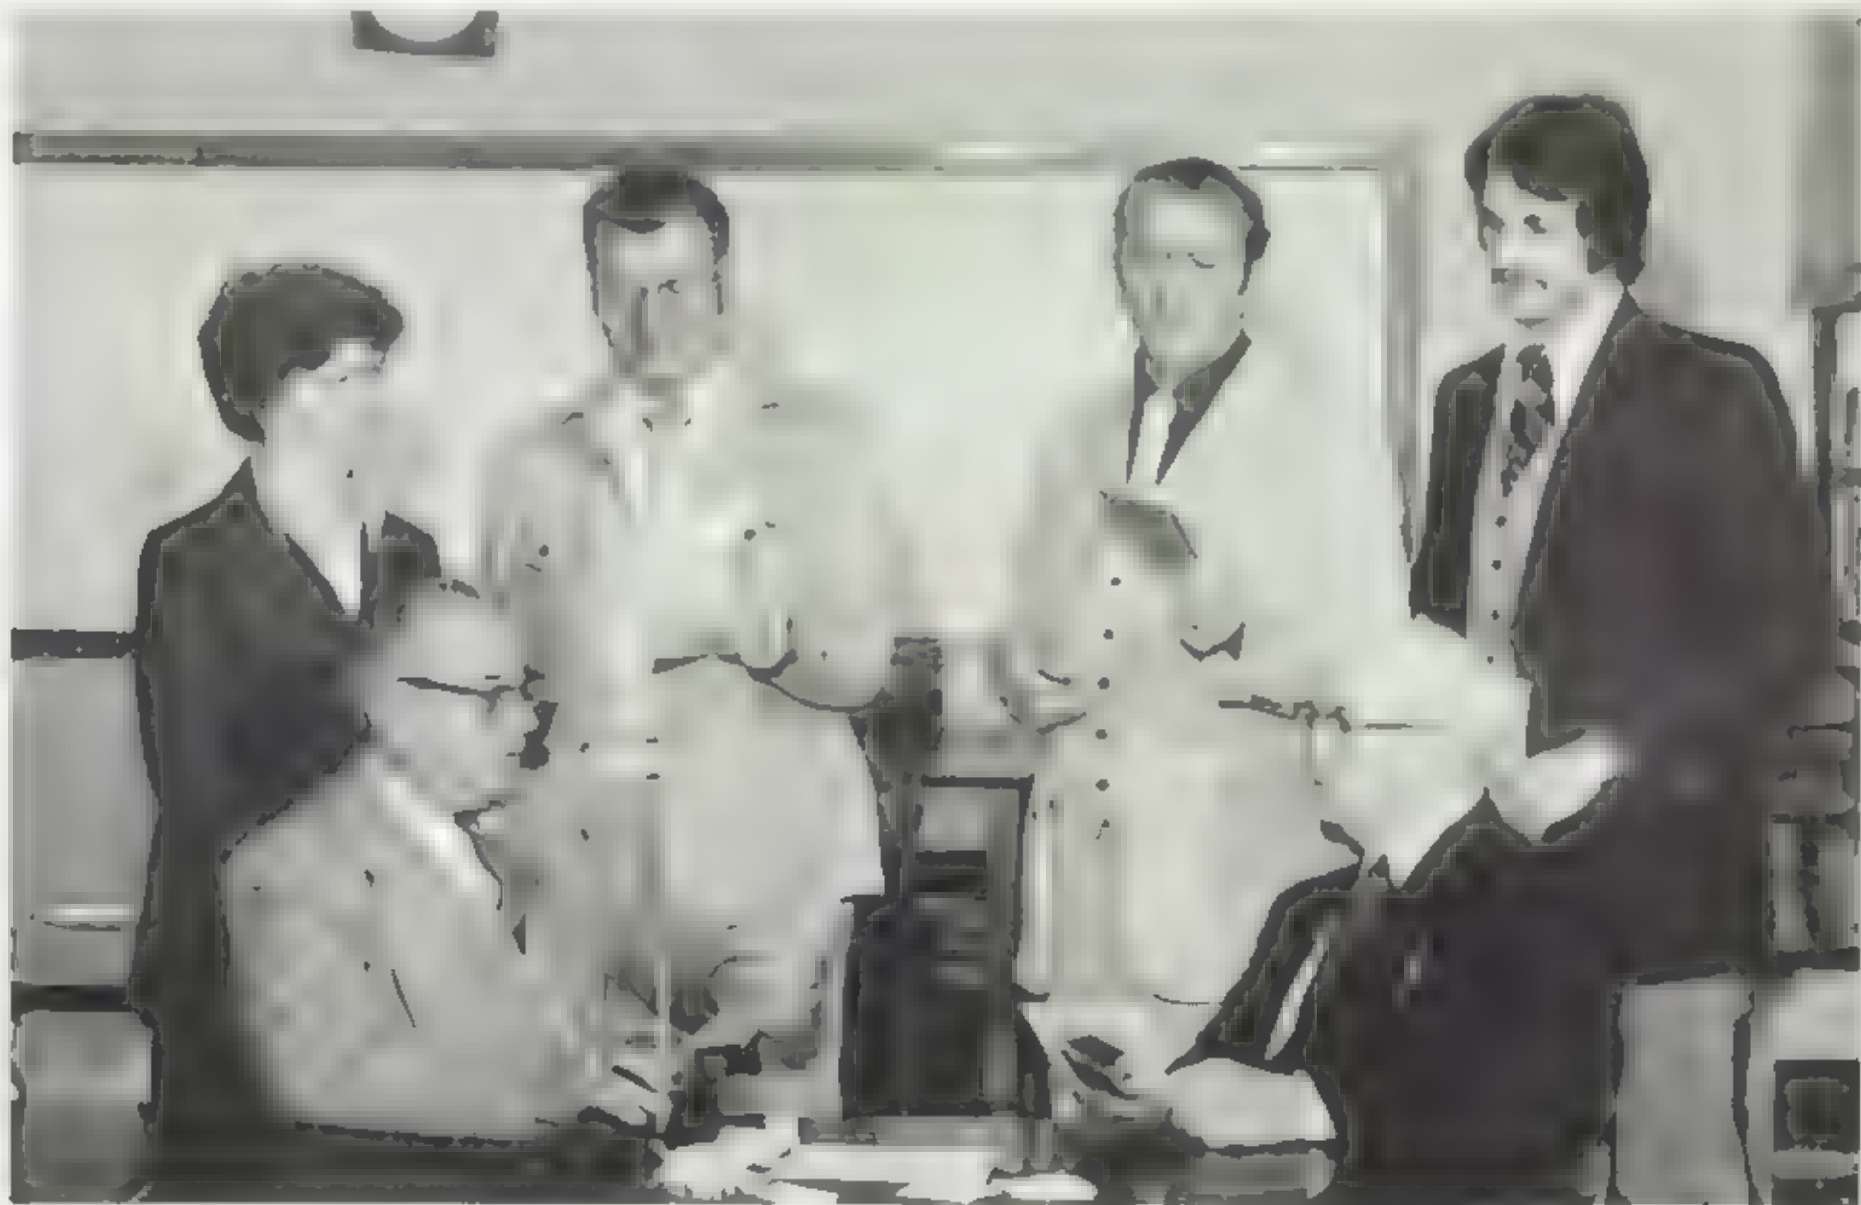

One of the founders of rock and roll, Elvis Presley, died during the seventies, and thousands mourned his passing. The seventies also witnessed the birth, and virtual death, of punk rock.

But the seventies weren't all sad. We celebrated the 200th birthday of the United States with festivities that lasted throughout 1976. The King Tut exhibit swept the nation, and tickets to see the treasures of the boy king were almost impossible to obtain.

Much of the entertainment of the seventies seemed like an attempt at escape from reality. Near the end of the Seventies, comedians broke away from the social-community type comedy that had flourished earlier. Guys like Steve Martin entertained us with crazy antics and a different approach to humor. Movies such as Star Wars, Rocky, Jaws, and Animal House were important in this decade. An important television program, at least to us as teenagers, was Saturday Night Live. Lots of things we disliked or disapproved of were ridiculed on that program.

Our years in school have been good ones for the most part, but we're glad they're over, even though we know we'll miss them terribly. Each person in the class is an individual, and even though we're all one class, each individual has his own special traits that make him memorable to his classmates. In future years, when each of us has built some on his life, we'll look back, reflect, and we may find that some seemingly insignificant events will be poignant memories.

Memo: To Mr. Berkebile

Will you write something for our '79 yearbook? Our theme is reflections.

From: Polaris Staff

Reply:

Isn't It Funny?

Isn't it funny — when the other fellow takes a long time to do something, he's slow. But when I take a long time to do something, I'm thorough. When the other fellow doesn't do it, he's too lazy. But when I don't do it, I'm too busy. When the other fellow goes ahead and does something without being told, he's overstepping his bounds. But when I go ahead and do something without being told, that's initiative! When the other fellow states his side of a question strongly, he's bullheaded. But when I state a side of a question strongly, I'm being firm. When the other fellow overlooks a few of the rules of etiquette, he's rude. But when I skip a few of the rules, I'm original. When the other fellow gets ahead, he sure had the lucky breaks. But when I manage to get ahead, man, hard work did that! Do you remember any of these incidents from the past? Try and project some instances from the past, evaluate your thoughts and feelings, look at the other side of the coin. If you do, you will be a better person. Funny, isn't it — or is it?
